Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act * FERPA

Santa Barbara City College maintains student records and privacy in accordance with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA).

What is FERPA?

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, as amended, sets forth requirements regarding the privacy of student records. FERPA protects students' rights to inspect and review their education records, to request to amend their educational records, and to limit disclosure of personally identifiable information contained in education records.

What are education records under FERPA?

Student education records are defined as records, files, documents and other materials that contain information directly related to a student and are maintained by the institution or by a party acting for the institution. Education records are NOT: sole possession records, law enforcement unit records, employment records, medical records, or post-attendance records.

Who is protected under FERPA?

All currently enrolled and former SBCC students, regardless of age, are protected under FERPA.

Are parents/guardians/family members allowed access to a student's educational records? When a student reaches the age of 18 or begins attending a post secondary institution, regardless of age, FERPA rights transfer from the parent to the student. Parents may only obtain non-directory information if the student has submitted an Authorization for Release of Information to Parents to Admissions & Records. Photo ID will be required.

The Authorization for Release of Information to Parents can be found here:

<http://www.sbcc.edu/admissions/files/AuthorizationforReleaseofInformationtoParents.pdf>

Letting GO

Successfully Parenting Your College Student

Once your student leaves for college, it can become one of the most challenging times as a parent/guardian/family member.

Your student will have plenty of new-found freedom and you won't be able to see him/her/them as often. You also may have concerns about how your student is handling being away from home for the first time, how settling in is going and whether he/she/they is adjusting to college life.

All of that is completely understandable; however, to allow your student to grow into their full potential as an individual, he/she/they may have to deal with some new and different situations without running to you (at least as a first option).

Let GO:

Letting go isn't easy. Take confidence in the fact that you have raised a mature student who you can trust to make smart decisions. Your student needs this to learn how to live independently and deal with life as it comes on his or her own. That being said, he or she will always know that you are just a phone call away should something become too difficult to handle.

Stay IN TOUCH (but not too much):

It's important for your student to become immersed in college life without you calling every hour on the hour. However, they are adjusting to a new life, also, and will likely need someone to discuss all of the recent changes with. Be open to talking to (but, don't force) them about how they are adjusting. If it seems like they aren't opening up to you, encourage them to talk to someone they trust. Let them know that you are there to talk, without judgment, no matter what the issue may be.

Give SPACE:

Many students often feel that they actually have less space from their parents when they leave for college than when they lived at home. While a parent's constant concern is well intentioned, the overbearing actions aren't doing the students any favors and often result in tension in the relationship. Allow your student to have the time and space necessary to adjust and make sure that that know you are always there when need-be. Check in every so often and schedule your visits ahead of time. All of this, compiled with unconditional love and you and your student will remain closer than ever before!

Don't VISIT Too Often:

If your student happens to attend a school that's not too far away, you will likely be tempted to visit frequently. Limit your visits to not more than one per month and, when you do visit, ask what they would like to do. Ensure that you make plans beforehand instead of just dropping by for a visit. This shows that you respect their new lifestyle as you would any other adult who may have plans.

Don't PRESSURE Them to Come Home All the Time:

Similar to visiting too often, you want your student to get the full college life experience. You certainly will miss them, but pressuring them to come home on weekends is not in their best interest. If they want to come home frequently on the weekends, encourage them to stay on campus, instead. Students who stay on campus for classes only and constantly return home tend to enjoy college less because they aren't as tied to the campus or the campus community. As an alternative, encourage them to join some campus clubs or activities to get to know some other students, which may help resolve the issue.

Avoid Too Much ADVICE:

Your student will likely get frustrated and complain to you about a lot of different things in college, from roommates to studying to finances and beyond. Though you may have answers to it all, mums the word unless they ask you what they should do. They likely just want someone to listen and someone to vent to - not someone to tell them what to do. In order to avoid a fight, lend an ear and let them know you are there to help should they ever need advice on dealing with any issues. That way, they'll know that you're ready to give advice if they ask for it and you don't come across as the bossy parent. When you do decide to give advice, make sure you're talking to them and not at them - the latter can cause anyone to shut out advice. Keep this rule of thumb in mind: as long as they're not in danger, there's no reason to become meddlesome (unless they ask).

Mistakes HAPPEN:

Allow your student to make their own mistakes and be fully aware that they will make mistakes.

Obviously, nobody is perfect. Who your student was in grade school and high school may not necessarily determine who they become in college - people make all sorts of decisions when independence is suddenly thrust upon them. Simply encourage them to stay true to themselves and, as you keep in contact with them, try to check in on their grade progress and behavioral changes to ensure everything is under control (without being controlling - you just want to make sure they're safe).

Many students have difficulty adjusting to college courses and their grades suffer as a result. Students who are over-achievers or who were straight-A students in high school can have difficulty accepting such realities. Focus on your student's efforts and not on the grades, letting him or her know that as long as they are trying their best, you are always going to be proud. A family members words of comfort can make all the difference in the world.

Assessment/Placement

English/Math

Changes to Assessment Process/AB 705

AB 705 is a bill signed by the Governor of California on October 13, 2017 that took effect on January 1, 2018. The bill requires that a community college district or college maximize the probability that a student will enter and complete transfer-level coursework in English and math within a one year time frame and use, in the placement of students into English and math courses, one or more of the following: high school coursework, high school grades, and high school grade point average.

What does this mean for students?

SBCC uses multiple measures based on AB 705, including high school grade point average, coursework, and specific grades for placement into Math and English courses that are not English as a Second Language (ESL) courses.

This data is collected when a student applies to the college. If we do not have a student's high school information, they may be required to fill out a supplemental form.

Assessment is now referred to as Placement.

A student can find their Math & English placement status by:

1. Logging onto their Pipeline account
2. Under the STUDENT tab, click on STUDENT RECORDS
3. Click on VIEW COURSE PLACEMENT & ELIGIBILITY
4. If your placements are listed as pending or no data exists for you, please click on the HIGH SCHOOL DATA FORM to submit the information required for placement.

To maintain satisfactory progress a student must earn and maintain an accumulated (all coursework taken at Santa Barbara City College total) grade point average (GPA) of 2.0 ("C" or better) and have completed more than 50% of all courses with a grade of D, C, Pass, B or A. If a student does not maintain satisfactory progress they will be placed on Academic Probation. If satisfactory progress is not maintained for two consecutive semesters (do not have to be concurrent) they will be placed on Academic Disqualification.

Academic Probation

A student who has attempted a total of at least 12 graded units, as shown by the official college transcript, shall be placed on academic probation if the student has earned an accumulated grade point average (GPA) below 2.00 in all graded units at Santa Barbara City College. Academic Probation shall not be noted on the official transcript. Students placed on Academic Probation may be subject to unit and /or course restrictions and/or other conditions of enrollment deemed appropriate by the Office of the Dean, Student Development. A student on academic probation shall be removed from probation and returned to academic good standing when the student's cumulative grade point average is 2.00 or higher.

Academic Disqualification

A student who is on academic probation shall be subject to disqualification if the student has earned a cumulative grade point average of less than 2.00 in all units attempted in each of two (2) consecutive semesters (do not have to be concurrent).

A disqualified student may be prohibited from enrolling in classes for one semester. After one or more semester(s) not in attendance, a student may reapply for admission or the student may petition the Dean, Educational Programs: Counseling and Student Development to be reinstated for the subsequent semester. Semesters are Fall and Spring. When reinstated or readmitted, the student will retain their prior academic standing and may be subject to unit, course or other conditions of enrollment deemed appropriate by the Dean until such time as they return to academic good standing.

Love's Closet

SBCC's "Love's Closet" provides gently loved clothing and baby/children's items to SBCC students at no cost to the student.

A little about Love's Closet

During a visit to Spelman College in Atlanta Georgia, SBCC Biology student Tiffany Love, learned about their clothing pantry for students and wanted to bring the same idea to SBCC to help students address a basic need they may be lacking: clothing. "Love's Closet" opened in April of 2019 and with the support of an active and dedicated campus club, the Society of Black Engineers & Scientists, as well as SBCC's Foundation, "Love's Closet" has a permanent home on the SBCC campus. Tiffany's primary inspiration has always been her mother, Pearl, who is now a nurse practitioner but was once a single mother working two jobs while attending community college. "She instilled in me the belief that I could achieve whatever I set my mind to, and she was always there to lift me up if I started feeling down."

The Closet has regular operating offers for regularly scheduled donation drop off and operation hours for students to come and get what they need. Additionally they will soon be able to take specific requests from students for items that they may need (e.g. a suit for a job interview, a warmer jacket, a pack and play for a baby, etc.) and a social media presence to provide everyone details about the campus service as well as a way to let the community know what we need.

Parking and SBCC Commute

Although SBCC has invested millions providing on campus parking the lack of available space remains a problem.

Most students find parking on the SBCC Campus challenging.

To ensure that parking does not interfere with academic achievement, students are urged to use alternative forms of transportation. Taking advantage of alternatives such as walking, bicycles, mopeds/motorcycles and the MTD student bus pass. If a student needs to drive to campus they are encouraged to take advantage of ridesharing or carpooling.
